

All Ireland Community Games Athletics Roll of Honour 1968-2019

The idea of Community Games was born in October 1967 when a local sports organiser, Joseph Connolly, gathered interested parties together in Walkinstown Community Hall to discuss the running of sporting events for children in a number of areas in Dublin. While it was proposed to start with athletics, the concept quickly expanded to embrace soccer, gaelic games, swimming, basketball and chess so as to broaden participation by children, in particular by those who otherwise would not have had an opportunity for competitive sports. Father Martin Tierney, C.C., Walkinstown, became the inaugural Chairperson and Joseph Connolly, the inaugural Hon. Secretary, a post he would hold through 1992. A provisional committee issued questionnaires to local tenants' and residents' associations to garner interest. A meeting of representatives from twenty-four areas covering the city and county of Dublin took place in Moran's Hotel at the end of March 1968 to form sub-committees and to draw up a programme. The competitions were divided into age groups under 8, 10, 12, 14 and 16 on 31 July, 1968. Independent Newspapers offered sponsorship for the events and the late Billy Morton put Santry Stadium (at that time named John F. Kennedy Stadium) at the disposal of the organising committee.

The Dublin Community Games took place over a two-week period in August 1968 with the athletics finals at Santry on Sunday 25th August in which over 620 children competed. By 1969 the number of participating Dublin residents' and tenants' associations had increased to 47 with over 1,800 athletes competing at Santry over two days in heats and semi-finals and 300 competing in the finals of 26 events.

Following the undoubted success of and experience gained from two Dublin Community Games, the executive committee looked further afield to examine the possibility of expanding Community Games into the provinces with a view to establishing national finals. Representatives of residents' and tenants' associations outside Dublin were approached with a view to setting up the Community Games system in their areas and counties. Members of the Dublin Committee attended a number of meetings around the country to offer help and advice.

In 1970 teams from seven counties – Cork, Kilkenny, Limerick, Louth, Roscommon, Tipperary and Waterford – travelled to Dublin to compete in the inaugural National Community Games. The Irish Independent provided the Games with national coverage as co-sponsor with the National Dairy Council. In 1971 sixteen counties sent representative teams to Dublin. The National Dairy Council published booklets on how to organise a team for the Games. A special promotional film was produced by the NDC which was shown in community centres throughout the country. Thirty-one counties took part in the national finals in 1973 with over 2,000 qualifiers from an estimated 500,000 participants at community level. The Games expanded to include cultural activities such as art, model-making, debating, dance and choirs. By the year 2000 there were over 6,000 local branches involving over 20,000 volunteers.

In 1973 the finals moved to Mosney, Co Meath, which would remain the venue for finals through 2008. The Community Games expanded to three days of competition in 1974 through 1978 and changed to two weekends of competition from 1979.

Currently they take place in May, principally team sports and cultural activities, and in August with athletics, team sports and cultural activities. With the conversion of Mosney into a residential area for asylum seekers, the National Community Games moved to Athlone Institute of Technology from 2009 through 2016. In 2017 the National Community Games Festival took place at the National Sports Campus in Abbotstown, Co Dublin in May and August to mark the Golden Jubilee of the foundation of Community Games in Ireland. In 2018 the Games moved to their current venue, the University of Limerick.
